8:00 – 8:30 am	Weather Data API Meet Up There are numerous consumers and providers of weather data in the industry, however there is no standardized API interface for sharing this information, making it costly and time consuming to connect to different data sources. Within the PAIL project, work has been done on how to model this type of observation and measurement information, but there have been no standardized implementations of APIs to exchange PAIL payloads. This session will review the PAIL work to see if weather data exchange could serve as a first implementation of the work to enable more streamlined sharing of weather-related information in the ag industry. This discussion will be used to gauge interest and determine scope for a potential working group. Facilitated by: AgGateway Portfolio Manager Ben Craker	Member Advisory Panel Join us for a quick 30-minute brainstorming session and provide your input on all things AgGateway! Facilitated by: Leslie Hedges, Director of Member Relations AGIIS 102 This session will inform users of the most efficient method to manage, navigate, input and access information to and from the Ag Industry Identification System (AGIIS). In this session, we will review the API developed by the working group to provide a standardized digital replacement for the paper ticket. We will also discuss next steps based on other gaps identified during the effort, such as advanced ship notices from the farmer, integrations with scale heads at the elevator/retailer, or settlement			Reserved for Quick Connect Meetings

10:30 – 12:00 pm	Opening General Session Opening remarks by AgGateway Leadership Overview of ISO Strategic Advisory Group on Smart Farming Presenters: Andres Ferrerya, Syngenta, and Jim Wilson, AgGateway Keynote Presentation: The Impact of Absentee Owners: Aligning Data and Sustainability Programs for Future Success The role of the landowner is not necessarily a first-order consideration for ag retail and its channel partners when the players are already working hard to cover the acres, services, and inputs demanded by today's conventional row crop producers. But that landowner has an outsized voice when it comes to production practices and the climate and carbon and stewardship programs that drive them. How does the value chain need to think about the potential – and inevitable – "ask" absentee landowners and investors are going to make of their farmer tenants? How do we keep a step ahead of the farmer to have the integrated production and practices data stack those farmers should already be keeping and may not realize they will need in the coming years? A future in which a bushel is defined by more than its test weight is already here, and farmer customers will need more and better tools to navigate the landowner and lease relationship as they seek to retain and grow acres. It's a new opportunity to deepen trusted customer relationships – and those with the data will win. Presenter: Jonah Kolb, President, Moore & Warner Ag Group
12:00 – 1:30 pm	Lunch (On Your Own)		AgCIO Roundtable Lunch (Invitation Only)
1:30 – 3:00 pm	ADAPT We will cover all things ADAPT, starting with a timeline and explanation of the relationships between ADAPT, the Standardization effort, and the WG19 Serialization project. Followed by a status and progress update for the ongoing activities and a look at where things are heading. Facilitated by: Kelly Nelson, Stuart Rhea, Chris Ruttencutter, Zac Oler	Entity Identification Business Rules Meet Up Farm and end use business identifiers and enumeration rules were last reviewed in detail in 2011. In the years since, business use cases, GLN enumeration rules, and the AGIIS directory itself have all evolved. This meet up will review the origins of the identifiers in use today, the enumeration rules agreed to by industry participants, and some of the current challenges to implementation. We'll discuss and determine next steps for the identifiers to ensure business continues to be efficient, effective, and standardized as new use cases and new business needs are brought forward and documented. Facilitated by: AgGateway CEO Brent Kemp and AGIIS Product Manager Josh Wall	eFields: Data that Informs Farm Operations and Feeds Research On-farm research is growing globally and infusing the work of farmers, industry and academia with actionable data. This presentation will discuss Ohio State University's intensive, coordinated on-farm research program -- eFields -- outlining both the successes and challenges to conducting and learning from field- and farm-level research. Dr. Fulton will also comment on current limitations, and what cooperative industry efforts are needed to produce new insights. Presented by: Dr. John Fulton, Ohio State University	AgCIO Roundtable (Invitation Only)
